Education is one of the key components in bringing change to the learning process. Through that one can explore and introduce a new structure of teaching-learning. As a result, National educational policy focuses on the distinctiveness of individuals and organizations at large. To understand the changing role of faculty, organization, and the significance of institutional preparedness on National Educational Policy. IQAC conducted a workshop on NEP- Making it Happen in association with Centre for Educational and Social Studies (CESS)

Objectives:

- To understand National Education Policy and its aspirations
- To explore the significance of Higher education in changing scenario
- To understand the importance of outcome-based education
- To highlight the importance of an Institutional development plan for quality enhancement

The session focussed on various topics like Learner Centred education, Changing the Role of Faculty, Research Innovation, Outcome Based Education, Institutional Development Plan, and Making it Happen – Way forward.

Transformation in learning ensures an understanding of individual capabilities. Learnerscentred education encourages the exploration of the talent and thrust area of learners. Earlier classroom teaching-learning was teacher-centred which has squeezed the innate ability of learners. This approach could not give enough space, and opportunity for learners. Therefore, the speaker suggested understanding the importance of Bloom's Taxonomy in developing advanced learning abilities and skills among learners.

Nothing can be changed unless faculty change their attitude toward learning. The upgradation of the teacher's knowledge holds the key to exploring the knowledge and ability of the learners. The faculty members through preparation, cultivating the habit of reading, upgrading qualifications, and adjusting to the changing pace help in meeting the aspirations of national education policy. The structured planning on curriculum delivery in line with Bloom's Taxonomy ensures focusing outcome-based learning.

Planning, Curriculum, and delivery play vital roles in higher education. The role of faculty in achieving the objectives of higher education's vision, and mission is truly immense and pivotal. The world is moving towards outcome-based learning through it wants to achieve the institutional benchmark in the teaching-learning process. The speakers stressed the paradigm shift in learning where faculty can understand the need-based teaching and cognitive prerequisites of learners. It helps in diagnosing the area of the learner's ability and the area that needs to be addressed.

It is observed that effective classroom delivery and research go hand in hand. Through this faculty can understand the value of upgrading knowledge in the respective domain. Speaker focussed more on the scope and opportunities for research in undergraduate colleges under the national educational policy. She threw light on the role of the National Research Foundation and its functions. Speaker also suggested the faculty for pursuing a doctoral degree and appealed to the teaching fraternity to focus on classroom delivery through research and experiential learning.

Strategic planning play's significant role in ensuring quality and outcomes. In the fast-changing scenario, the institution should focus more on developing an institutional plan for smooth and effective functioning. Speaker gave a comprehensive elaboration on IDP and its distinctiveness in building the organization. To enhance the function of efficacy of the organization and its quality, competency, and internalization of Indian higher education National Educational Policy focussed on IDP. Through this, the authority wants to fulfil the aspirations of NEP by making it Happen.

After each session, the coordinator of IQAC took the feedback of the participants

Outcomes of the sessions:

Faculty understood the significance of planning on curriculum and teaching-learning, the use of andragogy for better learning.

Session also motivated the faculty to upgradation of qualifications and knowledge
