About the FDP:

Research methodology is indispensable in every field of higher education; be it social science, pure science or business studies. Though it is a critical component of all the branches of knowledge but it hardly gets the attention it deserves in disciplines across university systems. The need for organizing such workshop and training camps further intensified due to wide use and application of appropriate research methods, quantitative techniques and computer software packages for objective and qualitative research. With this backdrop, the GIMS is organizing a day-long faculty development programme.

Rationale of the FDP:

- To enable research scholars, teaching faculty (from any discipline of applied science or social science), corporate executives and research scholars to develop appropriate methodology for research studies
- To familiarize participants with research methods and techniques - Qualitative and Quantitative.
- To impart knowledge about statistical concepts and their practical implementation in research-based projects.

Who can participate:

- Research Scholars, Post Graduate students
- Academicians
- Corporates

Introduction

Innovation refers to creating more effective processes, products, and ideas. According to McKinsey, 84% of executives say that their future success is dependent on innovation. For a business, it could mean implementing new ideas, improving services or creating dynamic products. Without innovation in the business models, pricing, planning, research, marketing, customer experiences, and team management it's not possible to grow the business, especially in the current technology era. Innovation is important to the advancement of society as it solves a variety of social problems and enhances society's capacity to act. It is responsible for resolving collective problems in a sustainable and efficient way, usually with new technology. In reality, it is the core reason for modern existence. Although innovation can have some undesirable consequences, change is inevitable and in most cases, innovation creates positive change. With the use of computer/internet and business technologies in research and product development innovation is much easier.
